

Maritime Trip Day 11 September 2, 2010 32 degrees C (86 degrees F) cloudy and hazy.

Another enjoyable breakfast with eggs, ham, bread, cheese, fruit, jam, juice, chocolate banana bread, tea and coffee. There were 6 other travelers for breakfast from North Carolina and Texas. We shared stories with them.

We relaxed until 11:30 when we took the ferry over to Quebec City for High Tea at the Chateau Le Frontenac, a Fairmont Hotel from the early 1900s. It is huge and can be seen from the photos! We had a lovely table with a view of the river. The Tea Service included fruit, tea sandwiches, scones with cream and jam, small desserts and our choice of tea for each person. Lorene tried a jasmine tea which was a bit bitter. The waiter gave us an extra pot because he wanted us to try the maple tea which none of us had selected. We all agreed it was not a favorite! Wayne and I had a Willow Stream Spa tea which was a decaf, light flavored tea. Bill was the traditional one with English Breakfast Tea.

We took a short cab ride back to the Market Place and had the best time purchasing berries, tomatoes, Kirby cukes, homemade bread (a loaf of $\frac{1}{2}$ white- $\frac{1}{2}$ wheat!), sausages, potatoes, green and wax beans, sweet corn and more! The prices seemed reasonable for a Farmers Market. It was all displayed so artfully! A short ecolobus ride then the ferry back to our B&B. The evening was a quiet one finishing books, checking emails, and snacking! Tomorrow we are back in the campers and on the road, again.
